Baiada Poultry (Steggles), Is one of the largest poultry producing companies in Australia, and with a history of over 65 years in the poultry industry. With over 10 processing plants, hundreds of farms, feed mill production and rendering plants, workplace health and safety is a given throughout the group, and the Baiada family strive to excel and minimize all of its employees, contractors and visitors to the risk of injury within the workplace.

Baiada Poultry PTY LTD engaged Australian Risk Services to assess report and gauge the strengths of its robust Workplace Health and Safety Systems, and compliance against AS/NZ 4801, in November 2012. The task was to utilize the 4801 Audit tool to assess the WHS system from Head office, and then visit allocated Baiada sites throughout Australia, to assess their compliance with both Head office Systems, and also compliance with As/NZ 4801.

This Audit comprised of the following elements:

- Desk Top Audit(documentation verification)
- Thorough Site inspection

Baiada Poultry had never engaged this type of Audit previously and expectations were undecided, but the results that have been recorded and recommended to Management will propel the company to a more pro-active workplace towards health and safety.

Australian Risk services Audit was in depth and direct, but also understood the business and its requirement's and high paced production culture.

The Audit identified strengths and just as many improvements, but has given our business further direction towards effective compliance with Workplace health and Safety.

As National WHS Manager, I was impressed on the knowledge of Paul Camelleri, towards all facets of WHS and his assistance in pro-actively correcting and recommending changes for the business in health and Safety

I have no hesitation in referring Paul and Australian Risk Services, for any services they provide in the Workplace Health and Safety field.

David Otte
